The journey from intent to results is often arduous, especially when it comes to legal mandates and policy. However, legally mandated CSR stands out as a notable exception. Introduced in 2013 amidst much skepticism, it was criticized as being an additional burden, a tax, and 'not business'. A decade later, the narrative has transformed.

This unique experiment, unparalleled in scale globally, has unlocked funds worth 2.2 lakh crores, making it one of the largest components of private giving in India. More importantly, 18,000 corporations contribute large and small amounts annually, with consistently increasing levels of governance and maturity. This is testament to the law's positive impact on India's development journey and its role in integrating CSR into business decision-making.

CSR is now a well established function within most large corporations, with dedicated teams, strategic planning, senior management attention, board involvement, and committed budgets.

'dus spoke India Inc' acknowledges this decade long journey, and the changemakers leading the charge inside India's largest companies. It also articulates the future of this journey, as visualized by these leaders. A future of catalytic impact, which is not about doing everything ourselves, but amplifying and unlocking others' efforts. I welcome you all to imagine and participate in this future, as CSR steps into its second decade of contributing to building a stronger, happier and equitable India. ”

-Atul Satija (Founder 2.0 and CEO, Give)

Leader Speak

AMIT CHANDRA
Chairperson, Bain Capital India;
Co-founder, ATE Chandra Foundation

“ The CSR law, for me, was never just a tax but a catalyst for social change. With around Rs. 20,000 crores growing yearly, it's encouraging to see its effect in enabling NGOs to tackle societal issues more boldly. It's filling vital institutional gaps and bringing social concerns into the corporate sphere, shifting key stakeholder mindsets. The potential for CSR to shape future developmental outcomes is immense. ”

ARUN SETH
Board Member & Co Founder, The/Nudge Institute;
Board Member, Jubilant Pharmova & Dixon Technologies;
ex - Chairman, British Telecom & Alcatel Lucent

“ Communities sustain corporates, rather than the other way around. Well thought out CSR focused on both programs and capacity building is the best way to give back to the community. It is a small step towards building a sustainable and equitable relationship between business and the larger community. ”

GOVIND IYER
Independent Director & Chairperson of the CSR Committee, Infosys;
Senior Advisor, Warburg Pincus;
Founding Member & Chairperson, Social Venture Partners India

“ Corporate Social Responsibility has a very critical role to play in helping build our communities. Over the last many generations, organizations have played a huge role in building infrastructure and community centers across India. The formalization of the CSR policy just helps us be more focussed. What is critical is for all CSR leaders to work together through collaboration and collective giving. ”

RAMESH G.
MD & CEO,
HDB Financial Services Ltd.

“ The CSR mandate has shifted corporate perspectives, urging us to think beyond the traditional triad of shareholders, customers, and employees. It's a revelation in hindsight – the essential inclusion of the community in our circle of responsibility. This evolution in thinking underscores the realization that our duties extend far beyond business transactions; they encompass the well-being and nurturing of the communities we serve. ”

S. RAMADORAI
Former CEO and MD
Tata Consultancy Services Ltd.

“ Reflecting on a decade of CSR in India, it's clear that what began as a mandate has transformed into a movement of pride and purpose. This journey has reshaped lives and redefined corporate citizenship, highlighting the power of collaborative partnerships. As we mark this milestone, CSR stands as a beacon for sustainable growth, social equity, and a promising future where businesses, communities, and the environment thrive together. ”

SANJIV MEHTA
Non-Executive Board Member,
Danone & Air India
Former CEO and MD, Hindustan Unilever Ltd.

“ CSR in India marks a significant shift in how society views business responsibility. It's increasingly about creating a positive impact on all stakeholders, including the wider society and environment. By combining efforts, focusing on long-term strategies, and effectively using talent and technology, CSR can address some of society's pressing issues, shifting from simple contributions to measurable impact. ”

SATISH REDDY
Chairman of the Board,
Dr. Reddy's Laboratories Ltd.

“ As leaders, we must see CSR not just as a regulatory checkbox, but as a core part of our business strategy. It's about creating a positive impact on society, which in turn fosters a sustainable business environment. ”
